BIOGRAPHY

After years in private practice at top tier law firms, Chloé Archambault said goodbye to the office and the partnership and started a new life as a writer. Since then, she has coffee in the morning with imaginary friends, one of them Ekaterina Yegorova, a Russian spy roaming the streets of Montreal.

Chloé writes in English and French with the visual in mind, a strong imagery being a defining facet of her writing style.

A born and bred Montrealer, Chloé lives with her family in her beloved city, where she studied literature and art history, then law. She wouldn't move anywhere else.
